

Micro GDD

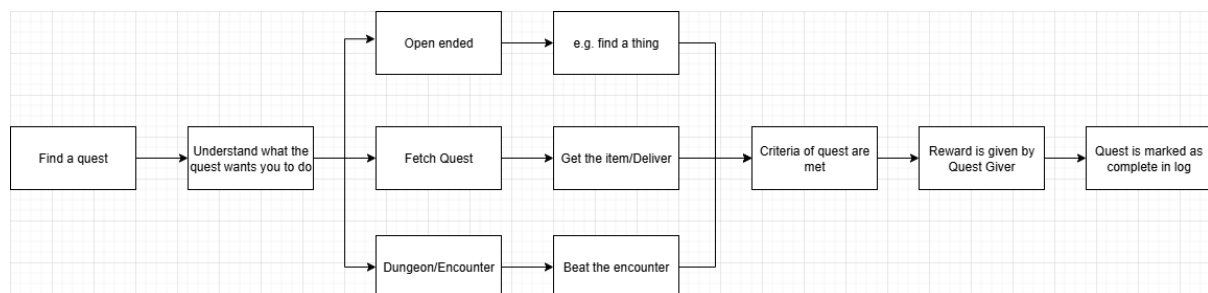

My FMP will be is a first-person action RPG set in a medieval fantasy world. The game will feature a combat system that involves both melee and magic, you will be able to customise the appearance of your character. There will be a focus on narrative and choice throughout the game mostly done through dialogue options.

Name ideas:

Under the Castle Into the Dungeon Battle of Castrum The War under Knell

Gameplay loop

The core gameplay loop involves completing quests:

A quest will typically involve some sort of combat encounter, typically quests won't tell you exactly what to do. Keeping quests open-ended like "Find a way out of the town" allow for more player agency and keep the player engaged in the game. A quest will have a title and a description, the title will be the literal task, and the description will be pointing the player in the correct direction like "Try talking to NPC's". The actual text will be fancier and will be more like the player characters own thoughts.

Skills

There are six skills: Strength, Stamina, Magic Tolerance, Speech, and Speed. These skills increase as you use them, and each governs a specific aspect of combat.

Combat

There are two main methods of combat, Magic and Melee. Both Magic and Melee combat rely on Stamina to attack, Melee taking more in order to attack.

Speed determines the Speed of the attack, and the players walk speed. Magic works inverted to most games, each time you cast a spell the Magic Tolerance Meter fills – when it is full you cannot cast another spell without having negative consequences e.g. if you cast a fire spell with no Tolerance left, you light yourself on fire instead. This is inspired by drinking alcohol and how everyone has a different tolerance for how much they can drink without negative consequences.

Plot

The player starts in a motte-and-bailey castle with a surrounding town; the town has recently lockdown due to two nearby cities have gone to war and the town has decided to stay neutral. The player wakes up, having woken from a coma (the player can decide why), the player character wants to leave the town by any means.

This leads the player to the “main quest” where the player must find a way out. The way out of the town is through the Castle Dungeons Sewers where the player will fight Guards, Prisoners, and Goblins. The player can find this way out via a Quest with a thief or dialogue with the Prison Chief.

Visuals

The game will have a Voxel art style. Despite the more cartoonish art style I want to have the environment grounded, taking heavy influence from 11th century architecture. There are three distinct areas in the game: Upper Town, Lower Town, and the Dungeon – I want each area to have its own distinct feel and to show the divides in the medieval society.